

LOOKING FOR JOB?

Finding a job, which really suits you, may take time. Many people find it difficult to keep motivated, finding work can feel like a job in itself, but your hard work will pay off. To keep on track, think about setting yourself a plan, here are steps that will help you to find the job that you really want.

You should begin by being clear on the type of role, or roles, you are looking for and the location you would like to work in. Don't be too narrow as you might not be leaving yourself with many options, and if you look too broadly you could become overwhelmed. It's important to give yourself enough time to spend on each application.

Think about where you could work – do you know which local and national companies offer the types of jobs you are interested in? You can research organisations online or ask friends, family or teachers/tutors for their thoughts. However, remember to stay realistic – you might have to start out doing something else before moving on to what you really want to do.

Make a list of ten organisations and start a spreadsheet to help you keep track. Find out if any of the ten organisations you have identified have any job opportunities that would be suitable for you. You can then choose the vacancies you want to apply for.

There are a massive range of job titles in use so you may not understand what level the position is and what experience is required until you read the full job description. Look out for job titles that include words such as 'Assistant', 'Co-ordinator', or 'Administrator'.

Now you can start applying for the vacancies – start with the ones that have the nearest closing dates so you can get your application on time. Keep copies of your application/CV/cover letter on file so you have something to refer to if called for an interview.

Make sure your application is tailored to suit every role – some of the content (such as education) will be repeated, but read the job description carefully and make your application relevant. Don't forget to check every application for spelling and grammar.

Remember to keep adding to your list of organisations, as some may not have any vacancies that are right for you. Keep them on your list so you remember where you have applied and then research new ones you can add.

Awards handed over to 'Last Seen' organisers

Manama

The Bahrain Polytechnic Student Council (BPSC) awarded the organisers of the first youth forum 'Last Seen' on April 23.

Held under the patronage of Acting CEO of the Polytechnic Dr. Mohamed Al Aseeri, the awards were handed over by BPSC's former president Noora Yaseen Albaloooshi to students and staff which assisted in organising the "Last Seen"; an event which brought guest speakers from various parts of the GCC to deliver presentations on the positive and negative aspects of social media.

On this occasion, Ms. Albaloooshi said, "Today, we celebrated not only the success of the event but the success of a dream that was merely words on paper, the success of a journey in which we learnt enough to come back stronger."

"I congratulate and thank everyone who extended a helping hand. A special thanks to our Acting CEO Dr. Mohamed Al Aseeri and Shaikh Ali bin Abdulrahman Al Khalifa, the staff, the leaders and the volunteers for their selfless support and enthusiasm," she said.

A hundred students volunteered in bringing the successful event to life, and they were divided into eight main categories - Public Relations, Media, Design, Registration, Sales, Scientific, Stage

Preparation and Floor support.

On the newly elected student council for 2015-2016, the Acting CEO said, "The polytechnic also hopes that this year's BPSC will follow the footsteps of the previous student council, where they will hopefully increase the number of volunteers and organise more activities for our students."
