Sharing hopes...

A number of Bahraini artists took part in 'Share the Hope', an exhibition for people with special needs, hosted by the Bahrain Polytechnic students' council. It featured works in various mediums such as painting, digital art, photography and movie-making. The event also included plays, a short clip and a debate on disabilities. Ahmed Jafar, a local volunteer and player in the national disabled sports team, and Multiple Sclerosis Society vice-president Ali Tulefat spoke of their battle with their disabilities. Tamkeen in mentoring programme TAMKEEN launched its first youth coaching initiative to educate Bahrainis in the basics of self-marketing and help them increase their chances of finding their desired careers.

"Market Yourself" provided participants with expert advice on professional curriculum vitae writing, interview preparation and the most effective keys to a successful career that are in line with the ambitions and aspirations of the participants.

The initiative is part of Tamkeen's advisory services, which offers mentoring as well as career and professional guidance to individuals and enterprises.

Participants interact with Tamkeen officials at the event

"The event is one of a series of planned initiatives that Tamkeen will organise to provide advice to individuals and enterprises, enabling them to make confident decisions to achieve their goals," said Tamkeen chief operating officer Amal Al Kooheji.

"This comes as part of Tamkeen's continued efforts to create a supportive environment that help enterprises and individuals grow and develop in the private sector."
